Software Tools for E-content development
Date: 17th and 19th April, 2020

In response to the challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic and the subsequent lockdown, the Department of Computer Science and Application organized two distinct online workshops on April 17th and 19th, 2020. The focus of these webinars was to familiarize teachers with various software tools for e-content development, providing them with essential skills for effective online teaching and learning.

The webinars were designed to address the immediate need for educators to adapt to online teaching methodologies. Dr. H.S. Hota, the key presenter, introduced a range of video conferencing tools such as Zoom and Google Meet. Moreover, he provided insights into essential e-content development tools, marked as MS-Power Point, Camtasia 2019, and iSpring Free Cam 8, emphasizing their relevance in the context of higher education. The primary objective of the webinar was to train and introduce teachers from higher education institutions in the state of Chhattisgarh to the software tools crucial for developing e-content. This initiative aimed to empower educators with the necessary technological skills to navigate the virtual teaching landscape imposed by the lockdown. The webinar series proved to be highly successful, evidenced by the overwhelming response from the teaching community. The first session, initially organized on April 17th, garnered such high demand that a repeat session was scheduled on April 19th to accommodate the numerous interested participants. The success was not only measured by the number of participants but also by the positive feedback received regarding the content and the practical relevance of the tools introduced.

More than 108 teachers from various higher education institutions in the state actively participated in the webinars. The engagement was not limited to attendance; participants actively interacted, asked questions, and demonstrated enthusiasm for incorporating the newly introduced tools into their teaching methodologies.

These webinars marked a pioneering effort in the state of Chhattisgarh during the lockdown, addressing the immediate need for teacher training in online tools and methodologies. The initiative demonstrated the commitment of the Department of Computer Science and Application to support educators in the transition to online teaching. The success of the program, as reflected in the high participation rates and positive feedback, underscores the importance of continued efforts to enhance digital literacy among teachers for the evolving landscape of higher education.
